Using the instructor monitor privacy controls

The “instructor monitors” are placed between every two student computers in the lab. Switching both lights to green will send the instructor’s computer image to all of the instructor monitors:

If the left light is off and the right light is green, the students will not be able to see the instructor’s computer on the instructor monitors:

The red lights control the privacy settings for auxiliary laptops. When the left light is red and the right light is off, the laptop image will be sent to all instructor monitors.

When both lights are off the laptop image will remain private and will not be sent to the instructor monitors.
